Mr. Kinney, of Boston, who is counsel for the Government in the matter of the defunct Pacific Bank, says of the charges against Cashier Kinn in connection with the failure of that concern that "they have not a word of foundation whatever," and that Mr. Kinn's connection with the affairs of the bank is entirely above reproach.

The London Observer, the organ of the clubs, says that if Americans had observed the Queensberry's rules in the shooting as that it may. It says the British Government to make a demand in his direction, and says that Americans should be told in the Gaelic signal to Sons at the Case of the Alabama claims—that it is "the duty of every Government to have such municipal law as will prevent injury to citizens of friendly States."

It is announced that Mr. Harrison will call upon Tariff bill for discussion tomorrow. Judge Kelley will assist. Morrison's motion to attack a direct negative. It is thought that all the Republicans but three will vote against consideration. Chairman Kasson favors discussion of the measure and a vote on a motion to strike out the enacting clause, but he will be governed by the majority of the party. The Republicans think that they can muster 170 votes against the measure, and that forty Democrats will act with them. This would, of course, dispose of the bill for the session.

Our special correspondent at Eagle City, in the Idaho gold regions, sends news, via Helena, under date of April 11, of discoveries of quartz leads at Eagle Creek, said to be so rich in paying ore as the Lancaster mountain. The first discovery was made by a boy. The prospectors are greatly elated, and anticipate a splendid harvest. Many claims have been already located by capitalists. One vein is from six to ten feet in width, and assays $50 per ton. The snow is fast disappearing, and the prospectors will soon be able to subsist fully on the work of mining.

We print in another column an interesting letter addressed by the editor of Tax Topics to the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher. Its subject is: "The Tariff and the Solution of Fifth Thesis." Mr. Beecher has been invited with being inconsistent in advocating a reduction of the tariff and at the same time supporting for the Presidency a candidate who represented opposite views. Mr. Beecher very well points out that the only hope of tariff reform lies in the success of Republican men and measures, since political immorality is approved by the party. There can be no refuge for honest tariff reformers in the Democratic organization, whose hostilities is the treatment of this as of all other important public questions only disgust and irritate intelligent men and hardly touch the surface of reform.

Businessmen will be found a communication from "D. F. B." of Peoria, in which the claims of Gen. Logan upon the Irish vote of the country are called to attention. It seems the writer thought the Irish Republicans regarding the alleged of an attempt made by the Fourth Assistant Postmaster to take the assistant Assistant education to from Ireland, has violated a surveillance injustice and will repay the treatise of persons. The word she is spinsters Senate Gen. Logan would carry New York and all the large cities to which the Democrats' power is said of admission to the Irish Catholic vote. To say Eugene Cox, Logan's popularity among all classes of Celtic citizens, or that he would deserve their support in the event of his nomination; but it remained for "D. F. B." to discern a contrast between the earnest services in behalf of Home Rule and the Geographical citizenship of Blaine (on and Harrison, of all time-genius. It is the more time it was to call that Mr. Blaine, largely because of its appropriateness, and because "Blood is thicker than water." It is great a favorite with the Irish, as the Senator from Illinois, especially with those Irish who place their native country above Roman Church.

An interesting interview with Judge Tree on the criminal law will be found on another page. The Judge says, and most observant and intelligent citizens will agree with him, that there are very few places where there is a rigorous and judicial administration of criminal justice. The laxity as frequent acquittals among the indigestion of hanged and moral people and both to lynch law and other extreme and repressive measures. The cause of the failure of justice is the conservative of the legal profession, which carries to extreme limits the doctrine that it is better to allow ten men to escape than that one innocent man should suffer, and which, though most laudable in good times, when protection for petty offenses does real service, are hardly to add to be so at this time. Judge Tree thinks that the criminal law of this State is permeated by the doctrine. He was newly elected by some which the prisoners have to his votes.

CRIMINAL LAW.

Judge Tree Says That the Criminal Law Needs Thorough Overhauling.

How Power Ought to Be Given to Courts and Less to Juries.

Is It for the Legislature, Do Sure, to Make a Great Deal That Has Been Done.

"These late disposures at the bar and on the bench," said a Tribune reporter to Judge Tree Saturday, "must do you think of the administration of the criminal law generally in this country?"

"I think it leaves much to be desired," he replied. "There is not a State in the country, so far as my observation extends, in which there is a vigorous administration of criminal justice. Throughout the country the people are the under dog in the fight. Every week frequent instances of justice that a serious crime has been committed in some community, which take practically the shape of trial-by-committee, the shooting of a jail, and sentences and which decisions which to a conviction, as in the case of Cincinnati. They are all evidences of the increasing lack of confidence in the swift and faithful administration of criminal justice. The people are the frequently justice miscarried that, which the offense is done, feel that it is from the courts, and are disposed to seek redress upon the offender in order to take care that, in that particular case at least, it shall be done.

"What remedy

"(1) Some things may be done in reference of the popular dissatisfaction with the faulty administration of the criminal law through the courts. It may be asked now in respect to the law of things. No sensible man about it is to go back some distance. There was a time when criminal law in England were very severe. Men were hung or drawn and quartered for very slight offenses. The shoplifter or an English pickpocket would make a man his life as punishment. The coming of a few years would be provided in the most severe manner. It was at that time that the high talk of our present criminal law was built up. The courts, recognizing the inhumanity of the criminal law, set to work to mitigate its severity. One line of their method again lately manifested itself in the effort to secure society's life. Those making of the code of the criminal law which were offensive to us in this day, such, for example, as that the accused party couldn't a witness's testimony from his own behalf, a prisoner's counsel was not allowed to address the jury, and the accused party couldn't have counsel to defend him, were all swept away from the law, or brought to the point of being swept away, by the courts. Another line of their method was to make a great deal of technicality and almost every case was thrown out by the application of some technical rule. The result was that the criminal law became a farce. Its administration of criminal justice that the courts of the State should be put together in the interest of the people, and should be made to secure the punishment of the guilty. This is the fundamental principle of criminal law. The courts

The services at St. Peter and Paul were the most in the matter appropriate manner that characterized the church on the occasion of Easter, each day having a more peculiar and touching significance. Father Dore read the usual Easter prayer, and the choir, with solos and recitations, rendered a part of the ceremonies.

The services were conducted by Bishop McCloskey assisted by Canon Knowles. The Bishop delivered a sermon on the Resurrection, after which confirmation services were held, about sixty persons being confirmed. The little girls, in white, the emblem with their white hearts, and the rest, entered their seats as confirmation began. The music was grand, the great assembly of forty men and forty boys in unison following, with choir soloists as organ guide, the selections from the Gloria, Credo, Sanctus, Benedictus, Agnus Dei, and Jubilate." Every seat was filled, and many stood during the entire service. The High Mass was celebrated by Father Dore, assisted by Father Fitzgerald as deacon and Father Fitzpatrick as sub-deacon. The music was rendered by the choir, under the direction of Prof. Lambert, and was of a very high order. The solos were sung by Miss Mary Ryan, Miss Mary Kelly, Miss Mary Ryan, and Miss Mary Kelly. The choir was assisted by a number of the members of the Philharmonic Society, who volunteered their services. The church was handsomely decorated with flowers, and the altar was a mass of beauty. The sermon was preached by Father Dore, who spoke from the text, "Christ Our Passover," and was listened to with the closest attention by the large congregation.

New York City is to have a cable electric railroad which is to be operated on the same principle as the cable railroad of this city. The passenger cars will be run by means of a stationary engine, with its boilers and machinery, on the Broadway and Third Avenue lines. The power will be the same as that used on the cable roads here, and the cars will be run at the same speed. The cost will be about $1,000,000 per mile, and the contract for the construction of the road has been given to the manufacturers of the Chicago cable roads, and have charge of the work.

John Harris, a young mulatto, claims that he was an assistant to the marking officer in January's saloon license fiasco, and John Young, who stood before the Board of Trustees as a Prohibitionist and asked for a license, and was refused, that he was the man who marked the saloon. Harris says that Young paid him $5 to do the marking, and that he was also promised $5 more if he would swear that he had done it. Young denies the charge.

Three years ago Miss Maggie Quirk, then 9 years of age, was placed in the Convent Orphan Asylum for her mother, Mrs. Mary Quirk, was then slowly succumbing beneath the fatal consumption which a short time after ended her life. Maggie Quirk left the Asylum in the charge of Patrick Quirk, a brother of her mother, and Maggie Quirk and Charles Quirk, a son of Patrick Quirk, lived together in the house of Patrick Quirk, No. 1,000 Fifth Avenue, Chicago. Patrick Quirk is a widower, and has been living with Maggie Quirk as his wife. Maggie Quirk, who is now 12 years of age, has been in the habit of attending the Catholic Church of the Holy Name, and has been a member of the Sunday-school connected with that church. Her teacher, Miss Mary Kelly, noticed that Maggie Quirk was absent from Sunday-school for several Sundays, and on inquiring of the girl's companions learned that Maggie Quirk had been sent to the Chicago Avenue Station-house. Miss Kelly went to the station-house and found Maggie Quirk there. She was released in her charge, and Miss Kelly took her to her home. Maggie Quirk then told her story. She said that Patrick Quirk had been in the habit of beating her, and that on Thursday night he had struck her with a stick, and had then turned her out of the house. She had gone to the house of a neighbor, Mrs. Mary Ann Kelly, No. 1,002 Fifth Avenue, and had remained there all night. Mrs. Kelly took her to the station-house on Friday morning, and Patrick Quirk was arrested on the charge of assault and battery. He was released on bail, and the case was continued until yesterday morning. Miss Kelly appeared in court with Maggie Quirk, and Patrick Quirk was fined $50 and costs. Miss Kelly then took Maggie Quirk to her home, and will keep her there until the case is finally disposed of.
